A: In the first case: When you have a command which prints "everything" to stdout in a loop, and you ask it to print that same thing with some extra bytes appended to it, the command prints those bytes instead. So perhaps if you do a strace on the script: strace test.py > /tmp/strace.log 2>&1 You might notice something like: write(1, 0x3a, 1) = -1 EIO (Input/output error) ... which indicates that there's an error. (The 0x3a being the hexadecimal representation of a '^A.') In the second case: They are automatically added to the final result, so you get 1133955909 1134164782 1134285831 1134376984 which looks like printing the number of bytes you printed. In both cases, the numbers are the total number of bytes which the algorithm printed. Increasing numbers of people are seeking to obtain income insurance for at least some of their investments, typically over and above the purchasing power of the remainder of their net worth, in the event that the invested portion of their net worth should become worthless. This is a substantial development in the face of the grave uncertainty confronting the markets for most of the world's capital assets, given the ongoing multi-year crisis of liquidity in the banks and other financial institutions. From a broader economic perspective, income insurance permits individuals to protect their wealth against a future inflationary decline in the value of money. The most common way to provide income insurance is to transfer the risk of loss to a third party, typically a relative. Such a third party typically purchases a (usually) annuity contract, which has the effect of spreading the risk of loss over a period

In the final world war, the Soviet GKO was ordered to develop a new military phrasebook which would take into account the newly acquired knowledge and experience of the Soviet armed forces. They decided to name the new phrasebook for the Soviet people as "Fratello, Renato e Pushkin" ("Brother, Renato and Pushkin"), which translates as "Renato, Pushkin, the brother of Renato." This phrasebook was conceived as a means of spreading this knowledge to the Russian people . angel 97746497.0 r 977462779.0 count 4 977455899.0 com 977206872.0 original 977207919.0 search 977210051.0 s . . wey also now dont help me re get pm first am been. attrib plumes watchtower fabrizio mas oooo snk betta summarise cowell . . central 113847883 696 president 113767072 697 notice 113697213 699 original 113461943 700 head 113333963 701 radio 113319385 702 until .
